JEALOUSY THE CAUSE.

A Young Man Shoots His Sweetheart and Kills Himself.

LAWRENCE, Mass., June 30. John Rausch, aged 24, this morning shot and killed his sweetheart, Maria Burckell, aged 18, and then shot himself through the heart, dying immediately. Rauch has been paying attention to Miss Burckell for some time and was extremely jealous of her. He called at her father's house last night and quarrelled with the girl, leaving the house in a rage. This morning Rausch called the girl out from the Everett mill where she was at work and after a few words shot her through the heart. He then turned the weapon upon himself. Miss Burckell was a young woman of excellent reputation. Rausch was also industrious and of sober habits.

THE KEYSTONE BANK.

Investigation of Its Officers.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30. No decision has been arrived at as yet by the council investigating committee in the matter of again requesting Postmaster General Wanamaker to appear before them as a witness. When the committee adjourned yesterday, no time was fixed upon for another meeting, the date being left open, subject to call of the chair.

A letter was received to-day by Mayor Stuart from Comptroller Lacey, in which he says that it is the purpose of the Treasury Department to aid in every practicable way in the investigation of the affairs of the Keystone National Bank and especially with a view to ascertaining who have been guilty of criminal violations of law or who have aided or abetted in the commission of such acts.

TIN PLATE.

The Last Chance.

NEW YORK, June 30. That part of the McKinley tariff bill which affects the duty on tin plate imported from England will go into effect to-morrow. The present duty is one cent per pound. After to-morrow the duty will be 2 2-10 cents per pound. As a consequence there is much activity among importers, who are anxious to get incoming steamers past the custom house. Every steamer which has left British ports within the last month has brought over a big cargo of the metal and the number of cases filled with tin that have been landed in New York city has been enormous.

FIVE PRISONERS SKIP.

But Two of Them Were Quickly Captured.

Five prisoners escaped from the Massachusetts State Prison, at Charlestown, Monday, soon after five o'clock. The men in the prison shops finish work at 5 P. M., and just after that hour a number of convicts gathered in the corridor of the north wing waiting to be locked in their cells. While Officer Norris in charge of the wing, was on the other side of the corridor attending to some sick prisoners in the cells, one of the window bars were either sawed or wrenched off, making an opening in the window 12 by 18 inches through which five men quickly passed to the "park" enclosure surrounding the prison just inside the outer wall. A piece of scantling was placed against the wall and in a twinkling four of the five were free.

Charles Baxter, alias Charles Orne, sentenced in Worcester, Jan. 27, 1890, to thirteen years imprisonment for larceny, from a dwelling was captured before he had time to leave the prison grounds, and was at once returned to his cell. Frederick Sturtevant, alias Frederick Buck, sentenced from Lawrence, Oct. 18, 1887, to twenty-five years imprisonment under habitual criminal act, was pursued by the officers and captured near the corner of Main and Union streets, after a slight struggle. The other three men had succeeded in eluding the officers and up to a late hour had not been captured. Their names are James H. Coffey, alias Frank Kennedy, Daniel Mullen, alias John Sullivan, each sentenced to five years in March, 1890, for larceny from a building in Boston, and John C. Lynch, sentenced to a short term Oct. 16, 1890, for larceny in Boston.

GOT THE MITTEN EVERY TIME.

"I can marry any girl I please," was his exclamation, but unfortunately then he did not please any, and there was a plain reason for it. He had contracted catarrh of the worst form, and although a wealthy, educated, attractive person every other way, he was positively repulsive to his lady friends, a number of whom rejected his offers of marriage. A friend advised him to use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. He took his advice, and now is the most popular beau in town, and he really can "marry any girl he pleases" to ask. It made his breath pure and sweet, he has no headache, no offensive discharges from the nose, in short, is in perfect health and all from using a few bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. WS&w

FEMALE TROUBLES

Complicated with Liver and Kidney Diseases, Cured by Dana's Sarsaparilla after the most noted Physicians failed.

WASHINGTON MILLS, ME., Dec. 10, '87.

Gents.—For the last three years I have been suffering from a complication of Diseases, and have employed the most skillful physicians in the state, having been treated by local physicians at home and by physicians in Portland, Me. All my physicians told me my disease was so complicated, I could never get well. And certainly all my medical treatment gave me no relief. I had no appetite, bowels in a bad state, female trouble combined with liver and kidney trouble, so said my physicians. I grew so weak and reduced, I had done no work for one year, when Dr. Tribou, my physician, at the time, advised me to try DANA'S SARSAPARILLA.

Soon after trying it I began to feel a wonderful change. I commenced to gain in flesh and strength, and after taking three bottles I felt like another person. I now feel well and strong and am able to do all the work in a family of eight. I feel that I owe my health entirely to the wonderful curative power of DANA'S SARSAPARILLA. I prize this valuable remedy highly, and shall earnestly recommend it to all the afflicted.

I cannot say too much in its praise for all it has done for me.

Very truly yours,
MRS. F. A. WENTWORTH.

Over three years have elapsed since the above letter was written. Mrs. Wentworth ... of ... DANA'S ...

Yesterday afternoon was pleasant and so the open tow cars were put into use again. The people appreciate the delights of a ride in these cars and patronize them a good deal.

The annual excursion of the Methodist society of this city will occur July 8th. The steamer Castine has been engaged and the plan now is to go to Camden to spend the day.

Haying is being commenced a little in some places, and before long a short walk into the country will bring one into sight and hearing of the mowing machine and other accompaniments of this business.

Our gardeners who have cultivated strawberries have been troubled very much during the wet weather by the slugs. They eat into the berries that lay on the ground and a great many are destroyed in this way.

The entertainment given in the South Brewer chapel Monday evening by the Watch Circle of King's Daughters of the Essex street Baptist church in Bangor, was an interesting affair, a programme consisting of musical selections, dialogues and readings being carried out, and it netted eight dollars.

Mr. Fred Barker is to take Mr. Herbert Bunker's place as secretary of the first Congregational Sunday school. Mr. Bunker has held the position for several years and has done the duties in a highly satisfactory manner, but is obliged to resign as he is now singing in the choir at the first Parish church in Bangor, and so is unable to be present to attend to the duties of the secretaryship.

Next Sunday is Communion Sunday at the first Congregational church. The preparatory lecture will be held this evening in the vestry in place of the usual Wednesday evening prayer meeting. This lecture is usually held on the Friday evening preceeding the communion, but as this year it comes on the evening before the Fourth of July it was thought best to hold it on Wednesday evening.

During her passage from Bonaire to Bangor the schooner Etna lost her mizzen topmast. They were only a short distance from Bonaire when it happened and a light breeze was blowing. The stick when put in appeared to be a good one, but it was apparent from the way in which it broke, in so light a wind, and the fact that it was broken almost short off, that it was a poor one.

Brewer is to be the first city in this section to have a building on the "flat" plan. The building that Mrs. Captain Joseph Nickerson is having built on Brimmer street, is to be one of this kind. It is to be 26 by 50 and two and one half stories high, thus accommodating three families. Each floor will have six rooms besides the pantries, and will be supplied with all modern conveniences.

Yesterday forenoon a rock or some other obstruction on the track threw one of the electric cars off the track near the site of the new Catholic church in South Brewer. It ran against one of the posts that support the trolley wire and damaged the roof a little, but otherwise than this no injury was done to anything. It took a long time to get the car on the track again and business on the line was suspended for quite a while.

At the Smith Planing mill during the summer in years past the shavings have had to be all burned up to get them out of the way and when winter came and no planing was being done wood had to be bought for fuel for the boiler furnaces. Now a large store house about 70 by 30 is being built near the company's office which shall be used for storing the surplus shavings and when winter comes they will have a large amount of fuel to run the boiler and a large saving in expense will be made.

Master Charlie, a six-year old son of Mr. L. H. Floyd, of Prentiss, made his first trip fishing the 25th ult., along with his father. On their return the little fellow wore a pleased and satisfied look on his face. The friends were very much surprised when they beheld the speckled beauties of trout the young amateur had caught, —four in number, the longest one a foot long and weighing a pound.

Mrs. Alexander England is seriously ill and her husband returned from No. 39 last Monday.

The Kimballs intend giving an exhibition in Dale Hall on Saturday evening, July 4th, and as it will be the only bit of amusement in town on that day, they ought to get a large house.

Mr. J. Norcross, of Bangor, was in town last Sabbath.

Quite a number of our young folks attended the ball at Macwahoc last Friday evening.

We learn that Uncle Sam contemplates change in the stage route between Macwahoc and Haynesville, by making the terminus at Wytopitlock instead of the former place, and putting on a daily instead of a tri-weekly mail. The length of the route would be the same and two post offices would be shut up by making the change and none would be opened on the new routes, so it appears that matter would be more subservient to the public good to let them remain as they are.

PENOBSCOT COUNTY POMONA.

Although it was a rainy morning at the usual hour patrons and matrons began to arrive at the hall, and soon all was activity and pleasure.

The meeting was called to order by Worthy Master Gregory. The only other officers present were the Steward, Chaplin and Secretary. Vacancies were filled pro tem by appointment.

After the usual opening exercises we listened to a very able and interesting address of welcome from Mrs. W. C. Bailey. The response by Mr. Allen Carter, of Hampden, was brief and to the point.

The Report of Granges being called the following were reported: Independent Eastern Star, Queen City, Mystic Tie, Exeter, Pine Grove and Garland.

Remarks by the members filled the time until dinner was announced.

The tables were soon filled for a ride of twenty-five miles gives one a good appetite, and all present seemed to enjoy themselves while disposing of the coffee, beans and pastry.

The noon hour soon passed and we were again called to order for business and entertainment.

After listening to music by the choir the Worthy Master instructed a class in the fifth degree.

The Secretary of Independent Grange read a very interesting letter from a former member of that Grange, written for the occasion, giving us some of the methods and extent of farming in Colorado, his present home.

The question for discussion was, Resolved that it is better for a young man to earn his farm than to have one given him. It was opened by S. W. Green, of Queen City Grange, followed by Messrs. Carter, Williams, True, French and others. The discussion was interesting and lively.

The literary entertainment provided by Independent Grange consisted of a recitation by Mrs. Young, select reading by Lettie Smith, song by Worthy Master Bailey, and recitation by Mrs. Brackett.

An excellent choir added much to the enjoyment of all.

Bradford is a good farming town, and a ride through the country at this season of the year very pleasant.

A vote of thanks was extended to the members of Independent Grange, and all left wishing them prosperity and happiness.

The next meeting is to be with Golden Harvest Grange the fourth Saturday in July.

Topic—Dairying: the causes of success or failure.

WEST LEVANT LETTER.

Several went from this place to Levant village last Sunday evening, to listen to an address by Miss Hattie Waugh, who has recently returned from the Sandwich Islands. Miss Waugh's description of the Islands, their beauties, peculiarities, etc., together with that of the people, and their manners and customs, was exceedingly interesting. Her manner of delivery was very easy and pleasing, and she held in close attention a large and appreciative audience. A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Waugh at the close of her address, followed by music which was finely rendered.

It was with the most profound sorrow that the sad intelligence of the death of Dr. F. N. Wheeler, of Camden, was received here. So large a circle of mourning friends as he has left is rarely known. It has well been said that "he gave his life for others," and it can truly be said also that he was one of the noblest works of God. Though many are in tears to-day for this honored and highly esteemed man, yet they feel that their loss is his eternal gain. His great life work is finished, and he is called up higher to receive the reward of the faithful.

A BAD BREAK.

Several Rods of the Dexter & Piscataquis Rail Disappear.

A Dexter despatch says: The job of filling in a bottomless hole has occupied a Maine Central crew of fifty men for the past two days and the job beat them after all.

About three miles north of this village the track of the Dexter & Piscataquis railroad passes directly across one side of a small muck pond. In the pond is a very little water and underneath an ill-smelling and unknown depth of mire which has swallowed up cows and uncautious animals from time immemorial.

On Saturday morning, the bog made an unusual gulp and took down about four rods of the Dexter and Piscataquis track.

Turgeon brothers, in Lewiston, have a fine lot of cultivated strawberries, forty fill a heaping quart measure, sixteen of the largest filled a pint measure. One strawberry measured four and three-quarters inches in circumference. They raise some two hundred quarts which they retain for family use.

A burglar attempted to enter the stores of John Gagne and A. Auger in Lewiston Thursday night. He had removed a pane of glass from the rear of Auger's store when John Demers, who lives over the store, discovered him. At first he thought it was a drunken man, but upon holding a light at the window the housebreaker fled. Officer Dan Flinn was called but the man was not caught.

Friday the Androscoggin Co. paid its help an annual dividend of 1½ per cent.

Quite a laughable incident happened in one of our churches recently, says the Journal. As the baskets were being passed for the weekly offering one little fellow who was enjoying his first Sabbath at church, deliberately put his hand in the basket as it was passed and took out one of the envelopes, and when the usher motioned for him to put it back he took out another for his sister. When made to relinquish them he did so with a very disappointed air.

Cumberland.

The annual meeting of stockholders of the Harris Palatial Car Co., was held at at the company's office in Portland, Saturday afternoon. The following were elected as directors: Edwin F. Perkins, Louie J. Harris, Charles J. Seymour, Alfred T. Ackert, Luther M. Harris. The following were chosen for the coming year: President, Edwin F. Perkins; Vice President and General Manager, Louie J. Harris; Treasurer, Charles J. Seymour; Secretary, Luther M. Harris. It is the intention of the company to build five more cars after the pattern of the "Jeannette," but as the company now own the drawings and designs the cost of each car will only be about $18,000. The five will constitute a train to run between Boston and the City of Mexico as an excursion train.

Friday afternoon a man named Burns, an employe of the Eastern Forge Company, Portland, had hold of the handle of a crane at the works that was lifting a piece of iron that weighed 2,000 pounds. The crane was not strong enough and broke, the handle whirling around and striking Burns on the back of the head. It was feared the injury would result fatally.

The Portland horsemen are taking an unusual interest this year in developing their horses. Presumpscot Park has been put into good condition and races are held each Saturday. This track is one of the best in the State, and it would seem as though races, which are conducted under the national rules, ought to draw big crowds.

William Sibley was thrown from his team in Augusta, Sunday afternoon, and quite badly bruised about the hip. He was conveyed to his home. A doctor was sent for and made an examination, but found no bones broken. Sibley had been drinking and was considerably under the influence of liquor at the time of the accident. The horse dashed furiously down Rines's hill, through Water street and across the bridge colliding with two teams and finally bringing up against a telephone pole. A thill was broken and the carriage was otherwise considerably damaged. The horse was unhurt and was taken to Gaslin's stable.

CLOCKS OLD AND NEW.

Earlier Clockmakers Outdone by Their Cunning Modern Rivals.

Whenever a really pretty and effective idea in house furnishing takes hold upon society in New York the rich soon seize upon it and make it their own. The article is overladen with precious ornament, wrought of especially costly material, or enriched with the patient hours of skilled labor until it becomes exclusively a luxury of the rich. This has been peculiarly true of the tall Dutch clocks so much prized by our ancestors. Some years ago the taste for these clocks was revived, and straightway all that had such ancestral furniture stored away at home and all that could lay hands on any such in the outlying country possessed themselves of these clocks. The clock cases, genuine antiques, were bought for a moderate sum, and, after being furbished up and supplied with new works, were set in the place of honor in many a costly New York mansion. The whole cost, however, was perhaps less than $100. Gradually the antique clocks became comparatively rare. Dealers bought up all that were within easy reach, and then prices rose. Then it was that modern manufacturers began to compete with the old clocks in existence for a century or more. The result has been to make expensive and complicated clocks a fad of the rich, says the Recorder.

Tall clocks of the familiar old pattern are now made of quartered oak, rosewood, mahogany and other expensive materials. They are also built to perform all sorts of odd tricks, just as the old clocks were. Some mark the phases of the moon; others show the movements of the planets, the relation of the earth to the sun, beside marking month, day, hour, minute and second. Others do all these things, and, besides, sound the chimes of Widdington or Westminster on long tubes of bell metal. These chimes are patented by an Englishman, and they yield him a handsome revenue. They strike once for the first quarter of the hour, twice for the half, three times for the third quarter and four times for the hour. Their tone is exquisitely soft and silvery. The best modern works are put into these tall clocks, and such a clock standing in the hall serves as a regulator for every other timepiece in the house. The price of these clocks ranges from $350 to nearly $3,000, and they sell as regularly as clocks costing but $5.

Genuine antique clocks still bring good prices. The cheapest, when bought of dealers and in good running order, are seldom much under $100, and some are as high as $500. The names of a few famous old clockmakers have come down to this age, and their clocks are still in demand. Two or three centuries ago it was not unusual for one of these clockmakers to work for years contriving to produce certain effects demanded by a wealthy patron. As illustrating the ... between the ancient and the modern ... it is interesting to note that a famous jeweller of this town has ... employment a man whose business it is to ... clocks that

WEDNESDAY, JULY 1, 1891.

To Our Readers, Greeting.

In presenting itself this morning in a new dress, THE WHIG AND COURIER may appropriately indulge in a little neighborly chat with its readers concerning the changes that have come and gone during the NEARLY SIXTY YEARS in which it has daily chronicled events in this community, and the NEARLY NINETY YEARS of its weekly visitations to the families of Eastern Maine.

It would not be possible to find a more striking or remarkable illustration of the march of modern progress and improvement than would be presented by a comparison of the first issue of the BANGOR DAILY WHIG, on the 1st day of July, 1834, with our paper of this morning, and yet the onward movement has been so steady all along the line of the world's advance that it requires the sharp contrast of the old with the new to enable people to realize how fast and far we have been leaving the ancient standards of news-service behind.

The printed page of the daily of that period measured 11 by 9 1-2 inches, the four pages containing 332 square inches of printed service—but very little more than the space on one page of our present issue, the four pages of which embrace over 2,000 square inches of type. The daily of July 12, 1834, quoted from a Nova Scotia paper eleven lines announcing the arrival of His Majesty's ship President at Halifax, bringing London news to May 20, announcing a split in the British Cabinet. This was the only strictly news item in the paper, the other reading matter being of a miscellaneous character.

A glance over the well-filled columns of THE DAILY WHIG of 1891, reveals a flood-tide of intelligence from the remotest regions of the earth, acquainting the reader at his breakfast-table with yesterday's happenings among peoples whose existence was hardly known when our weekly edition was established. Instead of awaiting the fortnightly budgets of news from Europe by sail or steam, the net-work of ocean cables has bound the nations and the islands of the seas so closely together, and the tireless agents of the Associated Press keep such sleepless watch in every city and hamlet of the globe that intelligence of a revolution in South America, a railway disaster in Spain, or the appearance of Speaker Reed at President Carnot's garden party in Paris, reaches us as promptly as the news of a fire in Brewer.

With the extended facilities have come increased demands upon the news service of the daily paper, until not one reader in ten thousand has the faintest appreciation of the numberless phases of indispensable information afforded day after day by the tireless brains and hands that keep up their ceaseless labor of answering the world's questions before they can be asked. In this matter of increasing and improvement of news service, a comparison of to-day's paper with the issues of the war-period and since would surprise many who have become so used to the present lavish supply of news that that they have forgotten what they used to think excellent enterprise. We do not feel that it will incur any just charge of egotism for us to say that there is no city in the land, of the size and surroundings of Bangor that is supplied with a better morning news service than that furnished by THE DAILY WHIG AND COURIER.

But it is not alone the news that constitutes the value of a paper. The character of a newspaper, like that of an individual or a business house, is a growth, and becomes an essential element of its worth and its success. The characters of newspapers are as various in quality as those of individuals, and as clearly recognized and understood.

For more than the greater half of a century THE WHIG AND COURIER has been building its character in this community, and the measure of success it has attained in securing the respect of good men and women, is in itself a tribute to the character of the people whose best impulses it has sought to represent.

The corner-stone upon which the character of the paper has been erected is the keeping of good-faith with the people. Good faith in upholding only that which it has honestly believed would promote good morals and the public welfare; good-faith in searching out the truth and protecting the public against deception, good-faith in sacrificing sensationalism to fact; good faith in keeping the columns of a home paper purged of what would carry infection into the atmosphere of home.

Only those who have been engaged in publishing a newspaper in these modern days, when the conspicuous financial successes are won by a journalism that rakes the sewers for salable filth, can understand all that it means to keep such good-faith with the people as we have mentioned. And only those who are carefully familiar with the newspapers of to-day, know how few, even in New England, have resisted the tide of pollution so firmly as THE WHIG.

For more than three generations this paper in its weekly or daily issues has been a part of the life of this people. It has exulted in their successes and sought to give cheer in time of misfortune. It has joined hands with church and school in promoting intelligence and Christian culture, and has rendered its willing aid to every worthy enterprise for the advancement of material prosperity. It has extended greetings at the marriage feast, borne the words of sympathy to the couch of sickness, and cherished in its columns the memories of the dead. Between the lids of its bound volumes is compressed the record of the daily life of those among whom we live and those who have gone long before.

Our highest claim must continue to be based upon the honesty and sincerity of the record and the earnestness and zeal of the service. If men feel better assured of the authenticity of a statement because it appears with our endorsement; if readers know that stale despatches do not masquerade under fresh dates in our columns; if fathers and mothers and sisters feel safe in welcoming our paper to their firesides; if even political opponents concede the sincerity of our opinions, and are not quite sure about the election returns until they are printed in THE WHIG AND COURIER, then we may feel that we have rendered some good service in our day and generation, and confidently rely upon a continuance of the generous popular support that we have so long enjoyed.

The Treasury and Its Critics.

[New York Tribune.]

An unfailing fountain of meanness, malice and mendacity appears in Democratic comment on the conduct of the Treasury. Nothing could have been more dishonest or dangerous to the country than the recent pretense that the Treasury was bankrupt, when it actually held $23,000,000 deposited in banks and as much more in cash over all liabilities. Then a malicious attempt was made to scare business men with assertions that the President was about to surrender to silver fanatics, and would order coinage of silver continued without regard to the law of 1890.

When this was shown to be false, critics were found mean enough to assert that their own false accusations had frightened him from a purpose which he doubtless never entertained. Now it is pretended that the coinage of trade dollar bullion and the recoinage of useless half-dollars is but a trick to keep up a fictitious appearance of surplus available, and that the return to the form of debt statement used by Secretary Sherman and others is for a deceptive purpose. Fortunately these many statements are so palpably unfair that they do not affect public opinion.

The trade dollar bullion has been included in available cash on hand in every monthly statement of assets since early in 1887, under President Cleveland's Administration, and no one has pretended that this bullion was not at any time available, because the law provided for its recoinage. The value will not be added to the available assets by recoinage, nor will the fractional silver become nominally one bit more available by recoinage of half-dollars into dimes than it is now. The difference is that there is a practical demand for more dimes to meet the convenience of business, so that fractional silver in that form can be used, while the excess of idle half-dollars cannot be used, but is now counted as part of the cash on hand. These two changes, therefore, comply with the wishes and needs of the people, without adding the amount of either of the two items to the cash reported on hand. It requires some impudence to pretend that either change can be designed to deceive anybody.

The last official report in December showed that there was on hand in the Treasury over $19,100,000 in half dollars, the amount thus held being nearly a quarter of the entire amount coined since the organization of the Government, the coinage having practically ceased for about twelve years. It was of no benefit to the Treasury to hold so large a sum in a kind of coin not wanted by the people. But the total coinage of dimes has been only $15,000,000 from the beginning, and if there is a demand for several millions more in actual use, the recoinage will not only serve a public convenience, but enable the Treasury to use part of the assets hitherto reckoned as unavailable for some purposes.

When the trade dollar bullion has been coined into standard dollars, there can be certificates issued against it in case of any further demand for such certificates, and in this way also the public convenience can be served. Meanwhile, it is not necessary to explain that the coinage of part of the silver bullion purchased would add not a penny to the available circulation, since the whole value is represented already by notes issued, and no more than the full value could be represented in any case. The circulation loses nothing by stopping the coinage, and the decision is calculated to strengthen public confidence.

The change in the form of debt statement by Secretary Manning was made without any authority of law, or any change in the laws governing the mode of holding or treating the different funds. On the first of March, Secretary McCulloch reported "cash balance available March 1, 1885, $152,225,052.96," but on the first of April Secretary Manning reported "net cash balance on hand $22,259,025.76," by deducting from the cash on hand the bullion fund of $100,000,000, which is pre-eminently available for reduction of debt, and the fractional silver, separately stated as not available. Yet the same Secretary not long afterward pledged part of this unavailable cash in New York to obtain gold thereon.

The object of the change was to produce the impression that the Treasury held a much smaller amount of cash than it actually held. The only reason for a return to the old form, which had been employed by Secretaries Sherman, Windom, Folger, Gresham and McCulloch, is that the cash held by the Treasury in excess of sums deposited for certificates outstanding is in law and in fact equally necessary and liable for the protection of any of its obligations. An honest Government will simply protect them all, and Secretary Foster has but recently declared the intention and the ability of the Government to protect them all.

COLBY'S COMMENCEMENT.

The Exercises Tuesday.—Class Day.

WATERVILLE, June 30. Tuesday was senior class day in Colby's commencement programme. The exercises began at the church at 10.30. The class orator was C. F. Leadbetter, who spoke on "Patriotism, What and Why."

The exercises on the campus were as follows: Music; prayer; prophecy, Franklin W. Johnson; class ode, smoking pipe of peace; music; address to undergraduates, Leland P. Sturtevant; parting address, Alvah H. Chapman; music; cheering the halls.

took place on the campus at 4 P. M. and resulted in a victory for the college team, by a score of 10 to 4 in seven innings. The game was without interest, as the alumni were wholly unable to fathom Whitman's delivery. The players on the alumni team were: Roberts, '90, Gilmore, '90, Larrabee, '87, Small, '87, Worcester, '82, Bowman, '87, Sampson, '89, Small, '86, Drummond, '88.

In the evening the church was crowded to hear the literary exercises. Prayer was offered by Rev. George B. Ilsley, of the class of '63, of Bangor. The oration was by Hon. Mark Hill Dunnell, class of 1849, of Minnesota. Mr. Dunnell took for his subject "The Republic." After reviewing the history of the first century of the republic he discussed the dangers imminent. It was not only the right, but the duty of the State to restrict immigration. He then touched upon the danger from great fortunes, though he saw a healthful counter tendency in the use the rich men made of their money in founding educational institutions.

The poem was by Harry Lyman Koopman, class of '80, of Burlington, Vt. His subject was "The Gothic Minister," and it was a very finished production. To-morrow occurs the graduation exercises.

WORST OVER.

The Water Receding in the Missouri.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 30. Almost the entire town of Harlem is under water up to the first floors of the houses. In West Kansas City the water overflowed the lowlands to such an extent that many families were compelled to seek safer quarters. The damage to property is slight. Reports from various points up river indicate that the rise is about over. The river will begin falling here very soon. At Manhattan and St. Joe the river is already falling slightly.

MUST FIGHT IT OUT.

Two Labor Organizations at Loggerheads.

WASHINGTON, June 30. Hugh Cavanaugh, of Cincinnati, and John Devlin, of the Executive Board of the Knights of Labor, had a consultation with Secretary Foster this afternoon on the subject at issue for some time between the Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Knights of Labor in which the reappointment of seven plate printers, removed from the bureau, was involved.

Arrangements were progressing for a settlement of all differences when a delegation representing the Federation of Labor called at the Treasury department and asked for a hearing before any agreement was made with the Knights. The Federation representatives were admitted and objected to any concession being made to the Knights which would put their men ahead of the members of the Federation already on the "chance" list of the bureau, waiting for employment. This new complication of the case made any final agreement impossible and the Secretary was compelled to leave the question pending until to-morrow, or the labor organizations can settle their fight among themselves.

WEATHER BUREAU.

The Formal Transfer to Take Place To-day.

Prof. Harrington the New Chief of the Bureau.

WASHINGTON, June 30. The formal transfer of the Weather Bureau from the War Department to the Agriculture Department will take place to-morrow. Gen. Greeley will then relinquish his duties as chief of the bureau and Secretary Rusk will assume them on behalf of the Department of Agriculture. The Secretary was to-day asked for a statement of his intentions regarding the future conduct of the Weather Bureau and pointed out the following passage in his last report to the President: "I deem it evident that in making the transfer of the Weather Bureau to this department it was the intention of Congress that the work of the bureau should be extended in so far as might be necessary to a full co-operation of this branch of the service with the work of the several divisions already established in this department for the benefit of agriculture, without in any way restricting its general scope."

He added that he proposed to carry out in full as he understood it, the objects which Congress had in view in the transferring the bureau to the Department of Agriculture. He proposes to perfect as much as possible the prompt dissemination of weather forecasts throughout agricultural districts. One of his first efforts will be directed to the accomplishment of this purpose. He declares himself fully impressed with the fact that the work of the meteorological service must be so extended as to include a thorough, systematic investigation into the climatic conditions at various sections of the country, that a full knowledge of them and their effects upon the plant growth may be available for the farmers.

The first official act under the new dispensation was the appointment of a new chief, Prof. Mark W. Harrington, of Michigan. Prof. Harrington has been for the last twelve years Professor of Astronomy in the University of Michigan, Ann Harbor, and editor of the American Meteorological Journal, and is about 43 years of age. He is regarded as an accomplished student of meteorology and climatic problems. He graduated in 1868 at the University of Michigan. In 1871 he was acting astronomical aid of the U. S. Coast Survey on the coast of Alaska. After this he returned to the University of Michigan as instructor in the biological department. In 1876 he went to Germany to pursue his studies, remaining in Europe about two years.

While in Europe he was offered a position as professor of astronomy and mathematics in the school of the Chinese foreign office, at Pekin, and as director of the observatory there he introduced into China the first large telescope seen in that country. In 1878 he accepted the professorship of biological science in the Louisiana State University, but returned to Ann Arbor in 1879, taking the position which he has held up to the present date. Besides editing the American Meteorological Journal, Prof. Harrington has published several papers and pamphlets on scientific subjects and compiled an almanac for the Chinese government.

GOT THE MITTEN EVERY TIME.

"I can marry any girl I please," was his exclamation, but unfortunately then he did not please any; and there was a plain reason for it. He had contracted catarrh of the worst form, and although a wealthy, educated, attractive person every other way, he was positively repulsive to his lady friends, a number of whom rejected his offers of marriage. A friend advised him to use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. He took his advice, and now is the most popular beau in town, and he really can "marry any girl he pleases" to ask. It made his breath pure and sweet, he has no headache, no offensive discharges from the nose, in short, is in perfect health and all from using a few bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. WS&w

The handsome new dress in which THE WHIG appears this morning is from that old, reliable and standard house, the Boston Type Foundry. The contracting parties were Harry O. Bartlett and Miss Ada Woodworth. The presents were numerous and very pretty. The happy couple left on the Flying Yankee to be gone a week. There were no cards.

Our issue to-day announces the declaration of the eighth semi-annual dividend of the Atkinson House Furnishing Company. It is now an old story but a most welcome one to its stockholders each January and July, and demonstrates clearly that this company steadily gains in popularity as a successful business undertaking as well as a profitable investment. It has proved that money can be safely placed to advantage in Maine.

Among the changes in the American Express service are those of placing two additional messengers on the day run between Bangor and Boston, Carl Durgin and S. E. Murch. C. H. Hawthorn takes the place of S. E. Hall on the run between Vanceboro and Bangor. The messengers on the Boston boats were withdrawn yesterday and the New England Dispatch Co. will attend to the boat business.

Death of Mr. J. Fred Leavitt.

The sad news was received in this city yesterday afternoon of the death of Mr. J. Fred Leavitt, in Boston, where he had been for several months. He has had a heart trouble for some time and had been in poor health for several years. The remains will be brought to Bangor for interment.

Mr. Leavitt's native place was Levant, but he came to Bangor at an early age with his parents. He was 49 years of age. After filling various positions he became connected with the European and North American railroad and became general ticket agent. He was afterwards employed on the New Brunswick Railway. Mr. Leavitt belonged to several Masonic bodies. He leaves a widow, who will have the sympathy of many friends in her bereavement. Mr. Leavitt had a wide circle of friends.

MISSING MAN RETURNS.

Daniel H. Cappers Comes Home After Many Days.

The strange disappearance of Daniel H. Cappers was announced in these columns week before last and his strange case has attracted much attention. The police were on the lookout for him and his disappearance was so well known that many others kept an eye open for him and it was thought to be remarkable that no trace whatever was discovered of him and not the slightest inkling was heard of what had become of him.

Yesterday Cappers returned and tells how he disappeared so completely and where he has been. A week ago last Thursday he left home, saying he was going out on a matter of business. He had been despondent for some time and had worried considerably over business affairs and other matters until he was hardly responsible, for a short time, for his actions.

On leaving home he went to the Maine Central station, after wandering about the city a short time, and took the train, going to Nashua, N. H., where he at one time lived. He cannot tell how he got there nor can he recollect much of what occurred while he was there. He recognized buildings and places he had known when he lived there and gradually the cloud lifted from his brain. Monday he was reading a newspaper and came across an item concerning himself, telling of his disappearance and the alarm of his family over his absence. Then he realized what he had done and immediately took the train for this city, arriving here yesterday as before stated. It was quite a strange affair throughout and his family are much relieved by his re-appearance.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Gormans' Minstrels Close the Season in Successful Manner.—Mr. Owen Presented with a Clock.

The season of Gormans' Minstrels and the Opera House closed last evening in a happy manner. There was a good sized audience present which was much amused and well entertained by the singing, dancing, specialty work, and the whole performance passed off with a snap that was refreshing.

John, James and George Gorman were as funny as ever, while a notable addition was Billy Van, who is inimitable in his specialties.

Estus, the wonderful equilibrist, accomplished some very difficult feats in balancing. The performance ended with "The Gambolliers."

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a very handsome clock to Mr. Frank A. Owen, who has so ably managed the Maine tour of the company. The affair was entirely unexpected. Mr. Owen was called upon the stage and Mr. James Gorman in a happy speech presented the clock, in behalf of the company, expressing their appreciation of his management and their friendship. Mr. Owen was much taken aback but responded in fitting terms. At the close of the performance Mr. Owen tendered the company a lunch at the Penobscot Exchange, which was a happy occasion.

BANGOR TRAINING SCHOOL

For Kindergarten Teachers—The Graduating Exercises.

At the chapel of the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon the graduating exercises of the Bangor Training School of Kindergarten Teachers occurred and the chapel was filled with the persons interested in the work being done in this city by Miss Lucy Doolittle, the principal. The programme has already been printed in THE WHIG. It was finely carried out and the exercises throughout were most interesting. Mr. M. H. Andrews played several violin solos in a harmonious manner.

BABY CARNIVAL

And Strawberry Festival at City Hall Tuesday.

The baby carnival and strawberry festival at City Hall yesterday afternoon and evening, given by B. H. Beale Post Woman's Relief Corps, was a successful affair, and the efforts of the ladies met with quite a substantial reward. The hall was decorated with much care and skill, excellent taste being displayed in the arrangements. From the chandelier in the center were suspended lines of bunting to the galleries and hanging from the gas jet was a large cluster of ferns. Along the galleries were the different army corps banners and small flags and evergreens. The stage presented an especially fine appearance. At the back of the stage were suspended flags, the Grand Army drum and the drums of the drum corps. Pictures were placed on the wall. The stage furnishings were from the establishment of the Atkinson House Furnishing Company, and were very handsome. Bouquets and ferns were tastefully arranged about the stage. Mrs. William Wallace had charge of the decorations and the effect did her credit.

There was a fair attendance in the afternoon to see the babies, who, by the way, were remarkably well behaved and evidenced very little objection to being on exhibition. There were sixty-six in all, and the following were those who received the prizes in the different classes, Mrs. Ella Lansil, Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. White being the judges:

Largest baby—Joseph Kelly, a chair.

Prettiest black-eyed baby under one year of age—Mary Louise Kenney, a cloak; blue-eyed, Jeremiah Sprague, long dress.

Prettiest black-eyed baby over one year of age—Mary Abbie Boyle, dress; blue-eyed, Eva Lenore Nason, short dress.

Best twins—Meredith twins, photographs.

Special prizes—Charles Edward Page, a ring; Earl Charlie Piper, a sack; Sarah Wardwell, prettiest gray eyes, worsted sack.

After the baby carnival refreshments were served by the ladies of the Corps. A table on the left of the hall where fancy articles were on sale, was in charge of Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Webster, while Mrs. A. J. Patterson and Mrs. E. G. Waldron had charge of the candy table. The following executive committee had charge of all the arrangements and to them much credit is due: Mrs. Littlefield, Mrs. Lansil, Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. White and Mrs. Patterson, president of the corps, ex-officio.

In the evening an enjoyable entertainment was given with the following programme: Piano solo, Mrs. Daggett; reading, Mrs. H. A. Davis, of Boston; song, Mrs. B. J. Hexter; reading, Mrs. Davis; bone solo, Mr. A. J. Patterson; reading Mrs. Davis; piano solo, Miss Edith Brown; reading, Mrs. Davis; song, Mrs. W. A. Nelson; reading, Mrs. Davis; Xylophone solo, Mr. A. J. Patterson; reading, Mrs. Davis.

The selections were rendered in a splendid manner and each one received a generous share of applause. After the entertainment had been concluded dancing was indulged in, good music being furnished by Messrs. Lougee and Cushing. The floor was cleared and this form of amusement was continued to quite a late hour and was much enjoyed.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

The Graduating Exercises Held On Tuesday.

A pleasant occasion in the vestry of St. John's Catholic church yesterday were the graduating exercises of the Catholic schools. The decorations about the stage, consisting of evergreen and flowers, with flags, were very pretty. Over the stage was the class motto, "Esse Quam Videri," and beneath it the figures "'91." The exercises occurred at 2.30 and the participants acquitted themselves with much credit. The programme was as follows:

McCarthy, The Sorrow of the Juniors; essay, (original), The Dignity of Women; vocal duet, The Swallows; Humorous, How King Toozlum Toozlum was Took; chorus, Distant Chimes; recitation, The Young Ruler; vocal, Lead Kindly Light; farce, When the Cat's Away the Mice Will Play; First Sonata, D. THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH

"Nero" Presented with Ballet and Spectacular Effects—Three Rings and Two Platforms.

"Nero," as it was presented by Barnum & Bailey at the Madison Square Garden, was a marvelously brilliant spectacle. There were 1,200 people in beautiful and bizarre costumes of the old Roman world, thronging the immense area of the place. The scene was filled in with horses, chariots of gold and silver, lights of every conceivable hue, the sound of music and strong vocal choruses. Just before the opening of the gates through which the procession was to issue, a hundred men ran into the auditorium, and in almost the twinkling of an eye the big floor was completely covered with a canvas carpet on which grotesque figures in various colors had been painted in bold strokes. A flourish of trumpets, the gates flew open and then there began to burst upon the expectant eyes of the audience a strangely enchanting sight.

The great procession poured into the garden. Every color of the rainbow was scintillating, flashing, sparkling, shimmering as if the place were one immense, ever-changing kaleidoscope. Groups of brilliant figures—gladiators, dancing girls, augurs, patricians. After the entrance and the triumphal procession were over, the various tableaux illustrating the drama were enacted in a brilliant and spirited manner. Next came the athletic games of the Circus Maximus, the dashing two-horse standing races, the elephant races, the races of the four-horse chariots, and lastly the thrilling contests between the previous winners, and then, as an ending to the spectacle, the finale of flambeaux and the nimble, graceful and exquisitely lovely festal dances.

It is almost impossible to do full justice to the splendor of the pageant. It was like an illuminated page from Roman history. The costuming was correct in detail, and the variety, richness and profusion of the material lavished upon the performance seem marvellous.

As to the circus proper, if any criticism is made on it, it is simply that there is too much of it. It is entirely out of the question for an on-looker to see more than a third of all that is going on at the same time. This year there are three rings and two platforms, each alive with performers, and often there were as many as four side-shows going on simultaneously.

The whole and undivided shows will be here on Thursday, and the great free street parade will take place in the morning at 9 o'clock.

A BOTANICAL POSER

A Naturalist Discusses Peculiarities of the Dog's Tooth Violet.

Nature has curious and hidden ways in the vegetable as well as in the animal world. For instance, that pretty and very abundant spring flower of ours, the adder's tongue or dog's tooth violet, presents a problem which I have not yet been able to solve. This plant, you know, is a lily, and all the lilies, so far as I know, have a bulb that sits on top of the ground. The onion is a fair type of the lily in this respect. But here is a lily with a bulb deep in the ground. How does it get there? That is the problem.

The class book on botany says the bulb is deep in the ground, but offers no explanation. Now, it is only the bulbs of the older or flowering plants that are deep in the ground. The bulbs of the young plants are near the top of the ground. The young plants have but one leaf, the older or flowering ones have two. If you happen to be in the woods at the right time in early April you may see these leaves compactly rolled together, piercing the matted coating of dry leaves that covers the ground like some sharp pointed instrument. They do not burst their covering or lift it up, but pierce through it like an awl.

But how does the old bulb get so deep into the ground? In digging some of them up in an old meadow bottom I had to cleave the tough, fibrous sod to a depth of eight inches. Some smaller ones were only two inches below the surface. A friend of mine tells me he has discovered how the thing is done. I hope either to disprove or else to confirm his observation.

The field of natural history has been so closely gleaned, so little remains to be found out about the habits of our familiar birds and flowers, that an unsolved problem like this is something to be prized. It is a pity that this graceful flower has no good and appropriate common name. It is the earliest of the true lilies and it has all the grace and charm that belong to this order of flowers. Erythronium, its botanical name, is not good, as it is derived from a Greek word that means red, while one species of our flower is yellow and the other is white.

How it came to be called adder's tongue I do not know; probably from the spotted character of the leaf, which might suggest a snake, though it in no wise resembles a snake's tongue. A fawn is spotted, too, and "fawn lily" would be better than adder's tongue. The "dog's tooth" may have been suggested by the shape and color of the bud, but how the "violet" came to be added is a puzzle, as it has not one feature of the violet. It is only another illustration of the haphazard way in which our wild flowers as well as our birds have been named.

In my solitary spring rambles I have sometimes come upon a solitary specimen of this yellow lily growing beside a mossy stone where the sunshine fell full upon it, and have thought it one of the most beautiful of our wild flowers. Its two leaves stand up like a fawn's ears, and this feature, with its recurved petals, gives it an alert, wide awake look. The white species I have never seen.—John Burroughs in St. Nicholas.

Gettysburg and Waterloo Compared.

At Gettysburg there were present in action 80,000 to 85,000 Union troops, and of the Confederates some 65,000. At Waterloo there were 120,000 soldiers of the allies under Wellington and Blucher, and 72,000 French under Napoleon; or, there were about 150,000 combatants at Gettysburg and about 190,000 at Waterloo. In each case the weaker army made the attack and was defeated. Lee did not have to face such heavy odds as Napoleon; but, whereas Napoleon's defeat was a rout in which he lost all his guns and saw his soldiers become a disorganized rabble, Lee drew off his army in good order, his cannon uncaptured, and the morale of his formidable soldiers unshaken.

The defeated Confederates lost in killed and wounded 15,530, and in captured 7,467, some of whom were likewise wounded, or 23,000 in all. The defeated French lost from 25,000 to 30,000—probably nearer the latter number. The Confederates thus lost in killed and wounded at least 25 per cent. of their force, and yet they preserved their artillery and their organization, while the French suffered an even heavier proportional loss and were turned into a fleeing mob.—Theodore Roosevelt in Century.

BITTEN BY A VENOMOUS COBRA.

Rapidity with Which the Poison Courses Through a Victim's Veins.

The African cobra is known as the "spitting snake" on account of its power to throw its venom quite a distance into the eyes of its enemy. It is a lazy reptile, save when stirred to anger, when it cannot be equaled for swiftness and accuracy in spitting or biting its victim.

The spitting is accomplished by expelling the breath sharply through the mouth, so that the soapy venom flies straight as a pea thrown from a pipe into the victim's eyes.

This cobra attains the length of six feet, and is large and powerful. It is doubly formidable from the fact that it can swim in the rivers very swiftly, and has no fear. In swimming the cobra moves along very rapidly with its snout and beady eyes just above the water's surface.

"When I was stationed with my regiment in Ceylon I had experiences with the Indian breed of cobra that were very exciting," says Lieutenant Jephson.

"My servants rushed into the bungalow one morning, begging me to save the life of a man who had been bitten by a cobra. I hastened out on to the veranda to find a crowd of men and women bringing in a man in a state of semi-unconsciousness. They showed me two deep-red spots on his instep where the serpent's fangs had been.

"I felt of his legs and found that they were already stone cold, although the man had been bitten but ten minutes before.

"Drawing my knife from my pocket I opened the sharpest blade and proceeded at once to cut deeply into the man's instep around the bitten part and cut the flesh away. Meanwhile I had sent in for a redhot poker.

"When the iron came I pressed its glowing end forcibly against the wound, searing the flesh about the instep. Then I poured a quart of whisky down the poor wretch's throat as rapidly as possible.

"He was so paralyzed from the effect of the swift poison that he suffered no pain from the searing of his flesh, but murmured only:

"'Burn, Dory, burn.'

"I watched him anxiously for half an hour, when he was able to open his eyes. Then I gave him more whisky and found that his pulse was much better. Another hour found him able to rise, after which I had the servants exercise him as much as possible in order to counteract the deadly coma which constantly came on.

"The next morning the native was quite well, save for the deep wound in his instep. I am sorry to say that he was always lame afterward, for it seems that I had severed a cord in his instep in my surgical attempt. But he became a sort of a pensioner in my bungalow, following me around as a grateful dog would do.

"I used to point to him with pride when my guests were present and say I cured that man of a cobra's bite.

"There is a vine which grows in India called the aristolochia indica which has cured many persons bitten by cobras, I am informed. They say that they crush a young leaf and apply it to the wound as soon as possible after the bite is inflicted."—San Francisco Examiner.

To Tell When a Car Is Loaded.

A device that will enable a railroad employe to determine when a car is loaded consistent with safety or with economical work has been a "long felt want" in railroad circles. An apparatus has been invented to supply this demand, and owing to its simplicity it is likely to come into general favor. The device consists of two distinct parts, the upper part being attached to the truck, above the spring on the side of the car, while the other part is fixed below the spring.

An adjustable pin is carried by the top part, and the bottom end of this touches the index finger that works over the dial of the bottom piece. When the apparatus is once adjusted the index, as the car is loaded, will indicate on the dial "full load" or "overloaded," as the case may be.—Exchange.

Slang in 1832.

In 1832 Coleridge in his "Table Talk," spoke of the word talented as follows: "I regret to see that vile and barbarous vocable 'talented' stealing out of the newspapers into the leading reviews and most respectable publications of today. Why not shillinged, 'farthinged,' tenpenced,' etc.? The formation of a participle passive from a noun is a license which nothing but a very peculiar felicity can excuse. If mere convenience is to justify such attempts upon the idiom you cannot stop till the language becomes in the proper sense of the word corrupt. Most of these pieces of slang come from America."

California's Model Constitution.

California's first constitution was adopted in 1849, and the state has had a new constitution since then. It was adopted in 1879, and furnishes an admirable illustration of the manner in which people who do not enjoy the benefit of the town meeting provide for the most minute and intimate subjects in the fundamental law of the state.—Henry Loomis Nelson in Harper's.

Woman Nearly Starved

MISTOOK THE CAUSE AND RESULT WAS ALMOST FATAL.

A sad case of starvation has come to light in Bernardston, Mass.

About ten years ago Mrs. A. C. Brooks, of that town, was taken seriously ill and since that time has been an invalid.

The simplest kind of food was more than she could digest, and medicine had no good effect. She could not even eat broths or meat juice, and most of the time her stomach was so weak it could not retain beef tea.

Nine different physicians attended her, and they agreed in saying that her case of indigestion was the most severe they had ever seen. At last, when it looked as though her days were numbered, and she was losing strength rapidly, Dr. W. H. Pierce recommended lactated food. To use Mrs. Brooks' words:

Lactated food gave me health and strength, and my restoration is due to that alone.

Mrs. Brooks' condition was similar to thousands where an easily digested, strengthening and pleasant food is necessary for recovery. In all weakened and debilitated conditions lactated food will restore tone, create an appetite, and hasten recovery. It satisfies hunger, gives strength, and is invaluable in fevers, dyspepsia and all wasting diseases.

The proprietors, Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., will send a pamphlet of rules for diet in dyspepsia, constipation, consumption, diabetes, Bright's disease, &c., to any address. It shows how much more natural it is to cure disease by proper food than by nauseating and powerful drugs.

The brusque and fussy impulse of these days of false impression would rate down all as worthless because one is unworthy.

As if there were no motes in sunbeams!

Or comets among stars!

Or cataracts in peaceful rivers!

Because one remedy professes to do what it never was adapted to do, are all remedies worthless?

Because one doctor lets his patient die, are all humbugs?

It requires a fine eye and a finer brain to discriminate—to draw the differential line.

"They say" that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have cured thousands.

"They say" for a weak system there's nothing better than the "Discovery," and that the "Favorite Prescription" is the hope of debilitated, feeble women who need a restorative tonic and bracing nervine.

And here's the proof——

Try one or both. If they don't help you, tell the World's Dispensary Medical Association so, and you get your money back again.

IN LOVERS' LANE.

All wreathed around with Virgin's bower,
And gay with eglantine,
All overarched with laughing leaves
And verdant with the vine;
Through memory's mists you rise as fair
As when with Mary Jane
I found your pitfalls perilous,
O dear old Lovers' lane.

'Twas there that Cupid kept his court,
'Twas there his arrows hung
Above our happy, heedless heads
The budding boughs among.
Tho' many a cruel wound was dealt,
Full many a fear was slain,
While lad and lassie loitered there
In dear old Lovers' lane.

'Twas there we put the purple on,
And breathed love's ampler air,
'Twas there a kiss conferred a crown
Upon a royal pair.
'Twas there our too fond hearts forgot
Life's penury and pain,
And earth became a Paradise
To us in Lovers' lane.

Ah, me! Beneath those bending boughs
Full many a ghost appears
Of youthful hopes that sprang, alas!
To perish, drowned in tears.
We find in ruins buried there
The castles built in Spain
Long, long ago, when sweethearts strolled
At eve in Lovers' lane.

Though hands and hearts grow gray, men go
All gladly back, in dreams,
From youth's lost glory yet to glean
Some faint reflected beams,
E'en he who limps Life's path along,
What time faith's bitter rain
Beats round, recalls some rose that bloomed
Long since in Lovers' lane.

An Absent Minded Artist.

As we were loafing about the fire at the club the other evening the talk turned on absent mindedness and some very good yarns were spun. One, of a prominent artist of Boston, whose name is familiar but will be suppressed out of consideration for his family. He is so absent minded that his wife is obliged to watch him as she would a child to see that he is properly dressed before he leaves the house. On one occasion he was to go to a reception and she elsewhere. She selected a shirt for him, put the studs in the bosom and laid the shirt on the top of all the others in the drawer. Then she laid out his dress suit and other belongings and was on the point of going away when the week's wash came from the laundry.

This she opened and disposed of, all but one shirt, which had collapsed, as shirts will, in the hands of the laundrymen. The bosom had parted company with the body and it was hopeless. This she tossed onto the bed, intending it for the rag bag. Then she went serenely in pursuit of her engagement. When her husband returned from the reception that night she was horrified to find that he had worn this wreck in the face of all the world and had not known it.—Detroit Free Press.

Repartee of George III.

George III once gave a hard hit at Lord Kenyon, one of the most uncomfortable noblemen in the English court. He came into the royal presence one day in great excitement, and seeing the surprise depicted on the face of the monarch said in self defense:

"I have lost my temper."

The king was quick at repartee, and without waiting for the explanation which was to follow said:

"I congratulate you. I hope you will find a better one, for your old one was the worst I ever knew."

The courtiers laughed, and even Lord Kenyon could not hold out against the general merriment.—New York World.

Automatic Lens Tube Governors.

The photo engraver has long felt the want of a means of automatically taking care of the exposures of the photographic apparatus, especially in the gallery containing several cameras. An invention has now been brought into requisition which automatically opens and shuts the lens tube of the camera and gives such a length of exposure to the plates as is determined by the setting of a movable contact piece upon the periphery of a clock dial at a number corresponding to the number of seconds required for the exposure.—New York Telegram.

Lesson from the Hennery.

Mrs. Suburb—My! Such a time as I have had today! Every now and then the hens would get into the garden, and the more I tried to drive them out the more they wouldn't go, but just squawked and cackled and fluttered and went hither and yon in every imaginable direction but the right one. No matter which way you try to drive a hen, she's bound to go some other way.

Mr. Suburb (thoughtfully)—I don't believe roosters would act like that.—New York Weekly.

The Origin of the Bedouin.

To Adam were three sons—a farmer, a hunter and a Badawi. To the latter, for his livelihood, Adam gave a camel. The Badawi came to Adam and said: "My camel is dead. What shall I do now for a living?" To whom Adam, "Go thy way, and live of what thou canst filch from thy brethren."—Saturday Review.

Terrible Effect of Eloquence.

An unfortunate man has obtained access to rich Baron Rapineau. He depicts his misfortunes, his misery in so moving a manner that the baron, with tears in his eyes, and his voice choked with sobs, calls to his servant:

"Jean, put this poor fellow out into the street—he is breaking my heart."—Exchange.

The constitution of New Hampshire was adopted in 1792, and has been amended twice. Vermont's constitution bears date 1793, and has been amended four times. Rhode Island lived under its royal charter until 1842.

The travel of thousands of human beings up and down the tiled corridors of the postoffice has so worn the tiles that it is like walking over plowed ground. An old man and his wife, evidently strangers on a visit, were inspecting the interior of the building the other day, when she noticed the roughness and called his attention to it, and added:

"Samuel, I didn't know that sich a floor as this ever warped."

"Of course it don't," he replied, as he stopped to look.

"Then it's settled or sprung."

"Can't be. Stone floors can't spring. Lemme take a look."

He went out doors and peered around for two or three minutes, and then rejoined her to say:

"Can't see any place where he got under, but I know what's the matter. Some stray hog's got under there and riz part of the floor up with his back. Don't you remember how they used to crawl under our kitchen and almost lift the hull house up?"—New York World.

The Cost of Feasts in the Past.

In 1638 the opening of Inigo Jones' new theater was celebrated by an elaborate banquet, attended by the lords of the council, and the bill amounted to £94 5s. 4d., exclusive of wine. Glass and plate were hired, and some of the former was broken and had to be paid for. We have the details of three dinners in [illegible]

AGRICULTURAL.

"He made money as a farmer, at good, old, honest work,
But he wished to make it faster, and so began to shirk.
He sold his farm, and put the cash into a mining scheme,
And now he runs an ash-cart behind a one-horse team."

It is better to run out of debt than into it.

There is more in planning than in hard work.

New England soils generally need potash.

The farm is quite as near to heaven as the city is.

Breeding is an art, but it doesn't follow that every breeder is an artist.

The rains help the weeds as well as the crop. Nature has no favorites.

"Test your cows" doesn't mean to see how little you can keep them on.

"Everything fed has been raised on the farm," generally means successful farming.

You can set a plant in any kind of soil, but you had better find out whether it will grow there.

The Jersey Bulletin says: "A good Jersey cow will make as many pounds of butter in a year as a good steer will make beef; the butter sells at from 30 cents to $1 a pound, the beef at from 3 to 7 cents; comment is needless."

One of the cheapest and best foods for ducks is green corn stalks, cut up into short pieces and sprinkled with bran. A few rows of corn may be used for summer feed, and it may be grown thickly in the rows. If cut when it is about three feet high, and cured, it makes excellent food for ducks and geese in winter. Ducks should be raised with but little cost in summer.

B. Wallace McKeen says: "There is something peculiar in the elementary teaching of agriculture, in that it will add general knowledge of common laws that govern nature's actions which shall be of lasting benefit to all, no matter what their occupation may be. Let us who are specially interested in agriculture not cease our efforts until this branch is added to our common school studies."

A hen may be an insignificant creature singly, but collectively she is of mighty importance to this country. She not only furnishes a striking standard by which to measure the values of other industries, but she contributes largely to the support of the people and the wealth of the nation. Hen men may be called "cranks," but they are the kind of cranks that help to turn the machinery of government and materially and substantially contribute to its support.

Goose raising may yet be made profitable. Geese are hardy and easily kept and cared for. The late Col. F. D. Curtis says: "Fence off a pasture, or a part of one, on a flat if possible, where there is good water, and confine the geese there. They will live largely on the grass. Here they can be kept the year round with suitable shelters. Goslings are hardy and easy to rear. The geese will furnish four crops of feathers, if well sheltered.

The American Agriculturist recommends that "whenever the oat crop does not promise well to be harvested in the usual way, by reaping and binding, the best economy will be to cut it earlier, the same as grass, rake it up in light windrows, and as soon as dry, stow it away in the mow, to be reached about the first of February for the milch cows. The value will be seen in the milk pail. The cows eat them up clean, and, if there is enough to last through March, the cows will come out to grass with coats as fine as silk."

There are some reasons why roots are preferable to corn silage. We speak more particularly of mangolds and beets. With a proper soil and proper preparation, they can be grown as easily, acre for acre, as corn; they produce more feed per acre; they contain more digestible nutriment; they do not ferment; they are easily stored in pit or cellar; there is no waste; they are quite as well relished as silage; and yet farmers generally appear to have an aversion to growing them, and while silage is popular, we presume they will adhere to that. Probably a little of both silage and roots would be preferable, all considered, as with other feeds they would add to the variety.

ROTATING PASTURES—A correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune says: "Divide the pasturage into four fields; place the cows in No. 1, horses and young stock in No. 2 and the sheep in No. 3. In a week or longer, move the cows to No. 4, the horses and young cattle to No. 3, and the sheep to No. 2, and continue this order through the season. The cows will thus have fresh, succulent feed all the time, and reward for it by a fuller flow of milk; the horses and young stock will consume much of the coarse and tufted grasses; and those economic gleaners, the sheep, will follow and clear up the remainder, together with the weeds and bushes, if any.

Household Hints.

For a grass stain on children's clothes, while it is fresh, wash it out in alcohol.

It is said that coffee grounds make a good filling for a pin cushion. The grounds must be perfectly dry before using and the needles and pins will never rust.

Home is the place for good manners. It is just as easy to set a good example for the children as a bad example. As the parent, so the child. Perhaps if we could see ourselves as others see us we would not wonder at the faults in the little ones.—New England Farmer.

In the kitchen, economy rightly estimated, is a power; it turns largely the balance toward profit or loss in the family finances. But the woman has the wrong idea of economy, who makes her pie crust tough, sweetens things with molasses when sugar should be used, scants the measure of ingredients in all her cooking and takes pride in her economy; pieces lie round on plates on her pantry shelves and either indigestion follows "eating to save" or the swill pail finally receives the remnants. Better economy would have made the food at its best, so that not a crumb would be wasted.—Mrs. A. E. Whitaker, in New England Farmer.

THE LUNCH BASKET. One of the essentials to an appetizing lunch is a clean receptacle for the food. A strong, light basket has its advantage; a lining of white paper will aid in excluding the dust. Paper boxes, plenty tissue paper and wooden toothpicks can be utilized in the packing of the prepared dishes. Articles not to be forgotten are bordered napkins, forks, spoons, mugs and salts. To keep the bottle of vinegar or salad sauce in position, pass the neck through a strap attached to the side of the basket. The [illegible] and portableness [illegible]

ing water. Stir well, cover and set on the back of the stove to infuse. Stir occasionally for ten minutes, and then set in a warm place and let settle. When settled pour the coffee through a fine strainer carefully so as not to take the dregs. Add enough cold water to make two quarts. Make very sweet and freeze. Serve in glasses. Part cream may be used with clear strong coffee, and a bit of vanilla bean put in and steeped with the coffee adds to the flavor.

TAMARIND WATER. Pour boiling water over tamarinds. Sweeten the tamarind water, making it acid or sweet and as rich flavored as you choose. Cool the water in the ice-chest. It is refreshing drink on hot summer days.

FRUIT LEMONADE. Slice four lemons and two oranges over a cupful of white sugar. Add two tablespoonfuls of strawberries or cherries and half a dozen slices of pineapple. Let the fruit stand for an hour, then add one quart of cold water.

LEMON CREAM PIE. Grated rind and juice of one lemon, butter size of an egg, one egg, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of corn starch; wet with a cup of boiling water. This will make two good-sized pies. Bake with or without top crust.

Learn to be Housekeepers.

Begin with your own possessions, girls. Reform your upper bureau drawer; relieve your closet-pegs of their accumulation of garments out of use a month or two ago. Institute a clear and careful order in the midst of which you can daily move, and learn to keep it so that it will be a part of your toilet to dress your room and its arrangements while you dress yourself, leaving the draperies you take off as lightly and artistically hung, or as delicately folded and placed, as the skirts you loop carefully to wear, or the ribbon and lace you put with a soft neatness about your throat. Cherish your instincts of taste and fitness in every little thing you have about you. This will not make you "fussy," it is the other thing that does that, the not knowing, except by fidgety experiment, what is harmony and the intangible grace of relation.

Take upon yourself gradually, for the sake of getting them in hand in like manner, if for no other need, all the cares that belong to your own small territory of home. Have your little wash-cloths and your sponges for bits of cleaning; your furniture brush, and your feather duster, and your light little broom, and your whisk and pan; your bottle of sweet oil and spirits of turpentine and piece of flannel to preserve the polish, or restore the gloss where dark wood grows dim or gets spotted. Find out, by following your surely growing sense of thoroughness and niceness, the best and readiest ways of keeping all fresh about you. Invent your own processes; they will come to you. When you make yourself wholly mistress of what you can learn and do in your own apartments, so that it is easier and more natural for you to do it than to let it alone, then you have learned to keep a whole house so far as its cleanly ordering is concerned.

A NEW INDUSTRY. A young woman living in New York, who had been considering how she could add a little to her income, was at a dinner party when the Samoan disaster was the leading subject of conversation. Presently one of the ladies inquired, "Where is Samoa, anyway?" To this question no one could reply. Here was the opportunity which the impecunious young woman had been looking for, and within a week she had studied the subject carefully, had prepared her notes and had sent out cards announcing that she would give an informal talk on Samoa at the house of a friend, whom she had interested in her project. Several ladies were present, and from the number a class was formed, the terms being a dollar for each lecture. Since that time the small class has grown to several large ones, and the bright woman has now a well-established business. This plan has started others to follow her example of lecturing on subjects which all women ought to know about, but which few really do know. The daily papers furnish the topics, and after the lecture there is usually a discussion. Besides being profitable, the work is decidedly interesting and pleasant if one has a taste for it.

When a child needs to be corrected do it at once and not put it off until night, and leave it to dream of being punished. How much little ones suffer, how many dispositions may be spoiled in this way. If a child goes to bed happy and knows it is loved by parents, how much better for it.—N. E. Farmer.

Improvements in Rolled Steel.

A protracted series of experiments made at Siemens' works, in England, with the new process of manufacturing steel tubes, show conclusively, it is claimed, a remarkable adaptation of the system to the manufacture of pipes for the conveyance of water, gas and air at high pressure, the manufacture of steam boilers, boiler tubes, and especially for bridge construction, owing to the lightness and strength of the tubes of comparatively thin steel, and which, it is believed, will enable the engineer of the future to considerably increase the span of bridges.

The simple as well as remarkable peculiarity of this process of shaping metals consists in the fact that, instead of avoiding any twist of the fibers, it by one operation gives the greatest possible twist to the fiber with a corresponding stretch of material. It moreover may, assisted by a mandrel, increase the outer diameter of a bar, instead of diminishing it, as do all other rolling mills, but the tube produced by this new method is generally greater in diameter than the bar from which it is formed, and thus combining, as it does, all the various systems of rolling, it is claimed to possess the advantage of a construction in which all hitherto known rolling processes represent a part.—New York Sun.

Who Haunts You?

Now think a minute. Is there not some unknown person whom you are always meeting in this great city without any reason for it? I have asked a great many people, and find that nearly everybody is haunted by some stranger. Just at present I am haunted by a red headed girl, who has freckles and a turn-up nose and wears a light gray dress. She turns up at all sorts of unexpected places. No matter where I go to lunch that red headed girl is sure to pass me on the way. Every day or two I meet her in the "L" car. I change the line, but sure as fate there she is. If I go out between the acts at the theater that red headed girl walks by. And so it goes, until now I have got to absolutely dread her.

The worst of it is that she is a nice looking girl and never seems to see me.—New York Herald.

A BAD HUMOR CURED.

$5,000 EXPENDED ON DOCTORS AND MEDICINE WITHOUT AVAIL. GAVE HIMSELF UP TO DIE.

GOOD WIFE SUGGESTS CUTICURA REMEDIES. USES THEM SEVEN MONTHS, AND IS ENTIRELY CURED.

I was in the war during 1863-64, and took a heavy cold at Gettysburg, from which I never fully recovered. In 1875 I broke out in sores all over my chest and shoulder, which seemed impossible to cure. I tried all the famed doctors I could find, and to no avail. I expended some five thousand dollars trying to find a cure, but could not, and finally giving myself up to die, my good wife suggested to me, one day, to try the CUTICURA REMEDIES, which were so extensively advertised and used. I followed her suggestion, and am happy to say by diligent application of your Cuticura Remedies for seven months I was entirely cured, after spending five years of time and money without avail, and am a sound and well man to-day. You may refer to me if you wish, as I will tell any one who may call on me my experience. C. L. PEARSALL,
